SELECTING THE PROPER GOLF CLUBS

And there are other things that create the golf enthusiast. There are any number of clubs that have been created by scientific minds to make for reacted by scientific minds to make for at least to lend good service in making) just the shot desired. Some of these from are so excellent, it has been claimed for them, and not without reason, that "they almost think." This is particularly true of the new golf sticks.

There are countless numbers to select from, so when you choose your new driver and brassic remember that the driver and brassic should match exactly in lie and approximately in length and weight. The driver shaft should have some whip or spring, and the brassic shaft should be stiffer. The spoon or wood cleck should be one and one-balf to two inches shorter than the driver, possess a shaft of rigidity, and should weigh a triffe more.

It is less difficult to select the frons than the wooden clubs, as their lengths are more nearly standardized. The angle of the irons should be so graduated as to become slightly more acute, in this order: cleek, driving from mid-iron, mashie, niblick and putter.

Of recent years it has been the desire of both players and manufacturers to reduce the weight of the hosels, and this has been largely accomplished by a recent patent, where the substitution of steel prongs for the round hosels actually reduces the weight of the head one and one-half ownes. This enables the placing of that additional weight in the blade, and thus increases the driving power and produces a lighter and more effective club.

The bottom or sole of his club should receive especial attention from the golfer, and if he has any tendency to "pull" or "slice" his iron shots he had better use one of the new self-centreing—shaft centres on centre of face—irons. This club automatically sets itself, with the result that much mental effort is climinated, and the player is left free to enjoy his game.

There is much to be said of present-day canned meats and foods. They are put up in such ways that their appetizing and nourishing quantites are conserved without any harmful drugs or agents. They are often fresher than the fresh foods, especially when the latter have undergone long-distance transportation, for the canned things are carefully inspected and prepared as soon as possible after they are taken from their place of growing.

In canned meats one can buy roast beef, corn beef, ox tongue, lambs' tongues, chicken tamales, luncheon sausage, potted chicken, boned chicken and turkey, chicken and chicken liver pates, braised beef a la jurdiniere, chicken saute a la marengo, veal and green peas, chicken curry a l'Indienne, veal loaf, ham loaf, corned beef, chicken loaf, corn beef hash, ham loaf, imported frankfurters, sliced bacon, sliced dried beef, pato de foie gras and a large variety of special assortments not so general in their usefulness. They are all surprisingly inexpensive when compared with the fresh food to-day, and, as they are so prepared as to keep their appetizing qualities, one foels impelled to say, in the words of the poet in Timon of Athons, i. c.: "There's No Meat Like 'Em."

Then for soups you can buy bean soup, pen soup and other soup stocks in powdered stick form—the contents of one "stick" and two quarts of wa-

We told you of the food pastes—game, meat and fish, that can be used for making sandwishes and salads. FOODS SUITABLE FOR VACATION SEASON

They Can be Prepared with Little Effort, Knowledge or Fire, and No Fallure.

Every vacationer has in his mind an aubition expressed by a character in "All's Well That Ends Well"—"I will show myself to be highly fed!" liut, trailing like an unwilling lackey after the thought comes another, that to be highly fed means a lot of work preparing the necessary food, and work is the bane of the vacationist who is seeking to escape it.

The informality that makes getting back to nature so delightful cannot be either dispensed with or if it.

Toll the formality that makes getting back to nature so delightful cannot be either dispensed with or if it.

Toll the formality that makes getting back to nature so delightful cannot be either dispensed with or if it.

The informality that makes getting back to nature so delightful cannot be either dispensed with, or, if dispensed with, enjoyed in the presence of servants. And who wants to cook when a-summering? Some might protest in the words of Spenser ("Faerie Queen").

But more would refuse the delights of "chefing" in less poetle phrasing liere is where the sanitary, carefully-inspected, hygienically-prepared and pure-food-expert-approved canned and delicatessen foods prove they are a great boom to humanity.

Dear Editor—Inclosed you will find two drawings and a story called "The Baby Bird's Every Morning Cry." I have not much to say, but I will write aid I can Last Saturday, when I told that I had stuck a nail in my foot, my foot is nearly well, and I sure am glad. I certainly am glad that school has stopped, so that I can have some fun when my foot gets well. I reckon I had better stop writing right now, as I might write too much in one might.

SOUTH RICHMOND WITHDRAW OBJECTION

TO ERECTION OF SCHOOL

Counsel for the aggrieved parties who sought to restrain the Manchester District Board of Chesterfield County from awarding a contract for the crection of a new school, have voluntarily withdrawn the application for an injunction, which was pending in the Chesterfield Circuit Court. It was decided that the board would be acting within its rights in awarding the contract, and that the court had no jurisdiction over its legal actions.

A meeting of the district school board will be held next week. Chairman W. F. Bryce will call it together, and plans for the school will be discussed and blids asked for, it is planned to erect a brick building, of four rooms, near Elkhart Springs, to replace the present Mann, Moore and Martin Schools, of one room each. The new site for the consolidated school is centrally located, and the erection of the building means a big improvement in the school facilities of the district.

The school board is also planning to increase the educational facilities of the Schools of the Schools of eight rooms each, were opened only last year.

Electric Power Economy

Central station electric power is the cheapest power possible for industrial purposes, because the motors actually save from 30% to 60% of the power required on a mechanical transmission system. They take power only when actually turning out work, and prevent waste at all other times. We will submit estimates of the cost of driving any manufactory by electric current and prove to you that it will save you money.
